Introduction

Welcome to hours of fun for a rainy afternoon! Or a sunny morning! Or any other time when you want to give your kids something fun and creative to do.

This playbook (why call it a workbook) of "things to do" for children, based on the lovable characters in the children's book, Rainforest Rescue: The Amazing, Fantastic Rescue in A Treasure Of Emeralds, Diamonds & Rubies. If your children have enjoyed Rainforest Rescue as a bedtime storybook, here is their big chance to color in the characters their own way, or make up little stories of their own as they play with paper dolls based on the book.

The Shimmering Rainforest characters have a save-the-rainforest theme, while the Shimmering Ballerinas & Dancers spin off from the sympathetic dance academy and dance troupes in Rainforest Rescue, who helped to rescue the endangered baby tigers by making phone calls, writing letters, and offering benefit dance performances. Characters like Glimmer the Glimmering Bulbina naturally lend themselves to what else but — glue and sparkling glitter!

Shimmering Breezes, an upcoming comic strip, breezes along with many of the same characters, including all the sympathetic students from Howar U. and familiar U. universities, who also tried to help save the baby twippadamooses in Rainforest Rescue. (Pronunciation aid for the names of the colleges: "How are children 'get it' quickly?" Even little sympathetic people helped to rescue the twippos, and now they would be glad to help rescue you from that age-old question of time, "Okay, kids, what would you like to do today?" Take a glance at the suggested supplies on the next page, and then go ahead and have a lot of fun!

May the shimmering breezes of love and laughter ever ripple through your hearts and homes! Om Shanthi, Shanthi, Shanthi! Om Peace, Peace Peace!

SUPPLIES NEEDED

For coloring:
crayons (spring for the big box, parents!)

colored pencils (don't forget a pencil sharpener) felt-tipped pens (the cheap sets run out of ink quickly, so don't rely just on these) thin-tipped black felt pen for dot-to-dot connections regular pencils for word games

Other miscellaneous stuff:
scissors (blunt-tipped for the smaller kids)

paste or glue (white glue for glitter, paste for gluing paper together with less ripples)

glitter

paper towels for wiping hands off scotch tape (removable tape costs more but is a blessing for children, as they can easily reposition something if they get it in the wrong place, like clothing on a paper doll)

loose t-shirts that kids can pull over their clothes to protect them, so that they don't have to worry about spills and smudges (available at low cost from craft stores) unprinted newspaper (available cheaply in large sizes from moving supply companies, protects carpets and tables without the inky smudges from newspapers)

dropecloths from the hardware store (wide variety available)

Other supplies may be needed for individual projects, as described.
Be sure to include an abundant supply of patience and laughter!

"Cover everything with big dropecloths from the hardware store! Then you won't have that crunch of globs of glue with glitter stuck onto them, as you walk on the carpet or floor later! Cover things from end to end! See? Even further than I can reach with my wings!" says Ican SoYouCan-Too, The Toucan

*The Shimmering Wind-Harp Butterflies
Who Shimmer Out Music As They Fly
(A Poem for Children)*

by Premia Nyofeh Light

While little rainbows are shimmering in waterfalls, as the sun shines out bright in the sky

The Shimmering Wind-Harp Butterflies

are shimmering out music as they fly!

They have tiny harps on their heads, and the breezes shimmer out the sweetest music with ease!

They flutter through flowers, and laugh all through the day.

And some of them have other instruments to play!

Little flutes, and horns, and jangling bells,

And little violins and drums as well!

You may never see them, because they are very shy,

But their relatives are all the other butterflies that fly!

Just feel love in your heart, when a butterfly flies by --

You will feel happier, and so will the butterfly!

Shimmering Breezes of Love & Light

Dedicated with loving reverence to My Beloved Guardian, Sri Sivan Sri Sivananda

by Premia Nyofeh Light

The fate of the world rests on shimmering breezes of love and light!
Not on current events, or international trade, although all these things have their place, and everything happens for some reason.

But the greatest force in the world is that Love that brought it into being in the first place,

The love that shimmers in glowing colors as rainbows in the spray of waterfalls, or that shines out as the shimmering golden sunlight that falls upon the eager faces of all the flowers that happily bloom, while basking in that warm and welcome glow.

The fate of the world rests on the unassuming sacred, whose wind of light that can brood over these great and saintly souls who are and do pray deeply, sincerely, steadfastly, and unceasingly, and even the rest of us who may set sail in that direction, with the hope that the shimmering cool breezes of love and divine blessing will comfort each our souls and whisk us across the sparkling waters of our lives in the directions of our intentions.

Deep in winter when the snow shimmers down millions of shiny crystal snowflakes, each one sparkling with the promise of beauty hidden within the ordinary, and the transformation of heart that can come in an instant, when all of a sudden, a wondrous day becomes incredibly beautiful, and jagged mountains, and we become aware of our hidden potential, and of the brilliant beauty blazing out from the galaxy of every second.

The shimmering breezes of love and light that have the power to lift us up from despair to hope can shimmer out into the world through our actions of lovingkindness, which in their own quiet way are ultimately stronger than all of the cruelty of any of the people who do not care to be kind.

There are still good and kind souls everywhere who yearn for a better day, for more truth, more love, more meaning, and the presence of God in their lives.

The shimmering cool breezes of loving kindness can blow over the hearts of millions of people in an instant, like the wind rustling through millions and millions of leaves;

wherever people hear and are their fellow persons doing things that their souls instantly recognize as right.

There is nothing quite like the crystal gleam and sparkle of ideas that shine out, unclouded by compromise.

In everything beautiful, there is glowing proof that ultimately, love and light will prevail over all that is other;

In our rain-splashed, shower of flowers, shimmer-glowing, star-sparkled universe.

MR. BEE GOOD

MRS. BEE KIND

HELPFUL TIP: Before you color all the bees, ask a group to copy all of them on a copy machine! That way, if you lose one, or some get crumpled, you can make more of them easily! If an extra copy is made before you color them, then the copies are all a crisp, clean black and white.

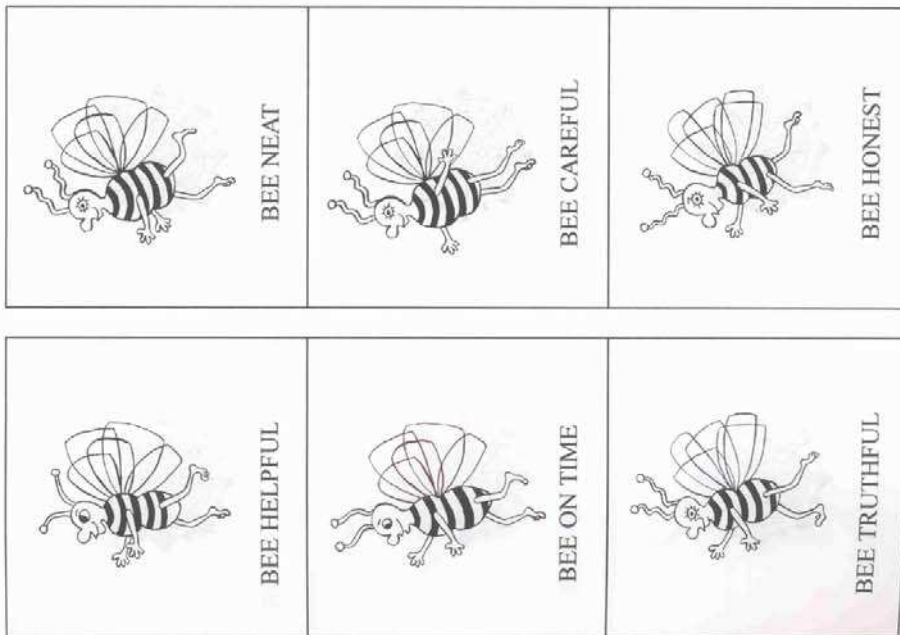

If you're able to make copies first, then do! (On heavier paper — ask for "cover stock"! ) Then color all the bees, and then cut out all the little cards! You may think that would be a lot of work! Hey, Bee A Lot Of Work! Another name for a bee! But it's fun — you can use all the colors in your crayon box! Following all the bees, are also some little cards with Wind-Harp Butterflies, Birds and Bunnies on them! Instructions for how to play some games with the cards follows after all of the little cards. It's probably better if you don't glitter the little cards, because that would make them lumpy and harder to stack. Feel free to use any kind of crayons, markers or colored pencils (except for chalk which might smear).

The Shimmering Wind-Harp Butterflies Floating On A Sparkling Lake A Story by Gema Jyoti Light

Once upon a time, deep in a beautiful green rainforest, there was a sparkling blue lake. It was a hidden lake --not very many people knew how to find it. And every morning, when the sun came up, little butterflies peeked out of the ruffy flowers that floated on the lake. They liked to fall asleep in the flowers, with beautiful ruffy petals all around them, and then they would wake up when the first rays of golden light were shining out from the sun, early in the morning. They would float sleepily in their flowers, bobbing up and down on the gentle ripples of sparkling water, as the early morning breezes shimmered out beautiful music through the little wind-harps on their heads.

They were special little butterflies, with tiny little harps on their heads, and the breezes made shimmering music in their little wind harps as they flew through the air, or even while they were basking still, if it was breezy enough. This helped the little butterflies to wake up in the morning.

Then they fanned out their gorgeously-colored wings, flew up and out of the flowers, taking off to sip nectar from all of the rainbow-colored flowers in the rustling, green, dew-spangled rainforest. They flew around to watch the pretty rainbows in the waterfalls, listening to the splashing water of the rushing rivers, and basking in the golden sunshine. Then, as evening fell, they would fly back to their lake to find flowers to sleep in again, and get all comfortably nestled in the ruffy petals before it got dark. They loved the flowers because they were really a lot like flying flowers themselves, with beautiful wings instead of petals.

Then one day, there was a big rainstorm, and all of the flowers on the lake filled up with rainwater! And they sank into the lake. No flowers or leaves could be seen anymore -- just sparkling ripples.

The butterflies got back from their wandering, at just about sunset, and looked for their flowers, but they were gone!

"What shall we do?" asked Jalinda, one of the pretty Shimmering Wind-Harp Butterflies. "Where did all our ruffy flowers go?"

"Let's ask Soggy the Froggy," said Jalisa, one of her sister butterflies. "He would know if anyone does! He is very good and wise, for a little blue rainforest froggy!"

"There he is!" shouted Jelani, another one of the pretty butterflies. "Over there, by the tall trees! Let's fly over there right now!" And six little butterflies flew off to find Soggy, the Rainforest Froggy.

He was happy to see them. "Hello there, you beautiful Shimmering Wind-Harp Butterflies. Have you come to give me a pretty concert of shimmering music on the little wind-harps on your heads?"

"Of course," said Jaha. "We love to be musical. But we need to find some ruffy flowers to sleep in tonight! What happened to all our pretty flowers on the lake?"

"They sank," said Soggy, with a sigh. "They got full of water, and they sank."

"Oh, no!" said Juma, one of the little shimmering butterflies. "I may never be able to sleep again!"

"Don't worry!" said Soggy. "Come with me! I know where some beautiful flowers are, high up in the rainforest canopy, way high up in the trees!" And all the little Wind-Harp Butterflies followed Soggy as he leaped up the branches. Up, up and up! Higher and higher! Until they reached some branches which were just loaded with gorgeous, ruffy flowers, of every color.

"Are these nice enough?" he said with a smile. "Please be my guest here. I like to sleep in these myself! They are freshly rinsed out with rainwater every day, and all the petals are soft and ruffy. I'm sure you will be comfortable here!"

"Thank you, Soggy!" said Jaha, another one of the Wind-Harp Butterflies. "These are just perfect! A friend in need is a friend indeed!" All of the butterflies agreed, thanking Soggy again and again, fluttering around happily and looking at the flowers. Each of them picked a nice one to sleep in for the night.

"Do you think there will ever be flowers on the lake again?" asked Juma, feeling a little worried. "I can't believe they sank like that!"

"Let's think positive!" said Soggy the Rainforest Froggy. "It's as easy to hope for the best, as it is to fear for the worst! And the best is much more likely to happen! Let's just have faith, that somehow, someday, we will one day have ruffy flowers on the lake again!" And they all fell asleep, in their ruffy flowers, high in the treetops.

And while they were sleeping, the swollen flowers started rising out of the lake. The currents of the lake tilted them, and they spilled out their water, bobbing up on the surface of the lake, all bright and beautiful, as before. They were like hopes and dreams for a better tomorrow, blooming beautifully on the sparkling surface of the lake.

So no matter how difficult things may seem, always remember to hope for the best, and have faith that somehow, in time, goodness and beauty will prevail in the universe, over everything that is distressing, or bad or sad. Lovingkindness towards one another can light our way! Happiness is our destiny!

Ribbons For Prizes So That Everyone Wins

When you play a game, it's nice if everyone wins something! So if you have more players than ribbons on these pages, just color copy them so that you have more to hand out! Before giving them out, put glue and glitter around the central circle to give them some sparkle and added importance! Parents, be sure to remind children that the outside point of playing a game is to have fun, so -- win or lose -- everyone wins if they have fun playing! And an orange ribbon is just as pretty as a blue one! The ribbons below don't have numbers or words on them. If you like, you can add these, but it may soften the blow of not being first, if the brightly-colored ribbons, sparkling with glitter, are not numbered. Then you can cheer Charlie about how you hand them out! If you make some copies of these ribbons while they are still black-and-white, then you won't run out! Then they can be colored and glittered. Suggested colors: blue, red, yellow, orange, purple and green. Don't just stop with first, second and third prize ribbons. If there are six players, go ahead and bring for six ribbons -- with a lot of praise!

"Bee Creative" Games To Play With The 'Four B's' -- Bees, Birds, Butterflies & Bunnies Cards!

1. Have A Story Bee!

Turn all the cards face down and mix them up! Then put them in a stack, face down. Then take turns drawing cards, but don't look at them until all the cards are drawn. Then turn all of your face up, and make up stories about them! Take turns telling your stories, or make them up together and share your Bees by using your Bees (or Birds, Butterflies and Bunnies) test the other players' Bees (or Birds, Butterflies and Bunnies)! Any funny story that you can think of is just fine -- have fun and don't worry about it.

2. Have A Spelling Bee!

Turn all the cards face down again and mix them all up. Then put them in a stack, face down. The first player takes the top card and reads it out. The second player then tries to spell it, without looking at it! If you really want to laugh, though, you have to realize that "Bee" is a pun on every card! (A pun is a word that has at least two meanings.) Here, "Bee" and "be" sound alike, although usually "be" is spelled with one "e" for something like "be happy!" So when you spell the words, just spell whatever follows "Bee". Keep track of how many words each player gets right -- the one who can spell the most words right wins! (The Bird and Bunny cards are not ideal for this -- just the Bee cards, is a better way to go on this one.)

3. The Wonderful 'Bee Threes!

Mix the Bee cards up face down, and then put them in a stack. Take turns drawing the top card, and then look at it and think of three ways to do what it says! For example, "Bee On Time" -- three ways? For dinner, for school, and for -- what? Basketball practice, or piano lessons! Or "Bee Considerate" -- of your mom, your dad, and -- who else? Your brother or sister? Or "Bee Happy" -- about what? The sunshine, your breakfast, and -- what? Being able to play after school! Or "Be Loving" -- in the summer, winter and spring? Bee Creative -- it's fun!

4. Match The Bees!

The best way to play this is to make a copy of all of the Bees on a copy machine, either before or after you color them. If the copies are made after you color them, then you only have to color one set. If you make copies while they are still black-and-white, then you have some to use you love them. Or don't! But with two sets of Bees, you turn the cards face down, mix them up, put them into a stack, and take turns drawing the cards from the top. Every time you get a pair, put them face up on the table or floor. If you get a lot of cards that have no matches, you can trade some with other players, or put two cards back for another extra one-card draw, when your turn comes around. Say, for example, that you have seven cards with no matches. On your turn, you can draw one card, and keep it, or also give two cards back for another one-card draw. If you want to, everyone can put the returned cards face down in another pile, and when the stack runs out, you can all draw from that pile again. The one who gets the most pairs wins!

5. Game Board Fun, with Bees, Birds, Bunnies & Butterflies!

You can take the game board from this book, cut out the page, and use dice and tokens from any board game that you can have. Make separate stacks of Bees, Birds, Bunnies & Butterflies, and when you land on certain colors of dice, you can draw from these different piles! You can make up the rules as you go along, as long as they're fair, or at least funny!

Every time you draw a butterfly card, think of the name of a flower, real or invented.

Every time you draw a bunny card, tell some experience you've ever had, or would like to have, with listening in the way described on the card.

Every time you draw a bird, think of a nice song you know, and sing it, if you like! Don't say you can't think of any song – everyone knows, “Twinkle Twinkle Little Star!” There aren't a lot of bird cards in this edition of this book, so making copies would help to give you more bird cards.

You can color the squares of the game board any color that you like. Pick one color, say green, that is a backdrop (if you land on that square, with a dice throw, then you go back two squares). Another color is a skip-ahead-two-squares color.

You can decide that the “End” destination is anything desirable to you and whoever you are playing with – a mall, or a restaurant, or playground, or amusement park, or swimming pool, or – I? You name it! Whoever gets there first gets the first prize, but remember – everyone gets there eventually!

6. Bee Twice As Many Players As You Really Have!

Are there only two or three of you? Or just little you? Do you wish you had more children to play with, but there are no play dates set for right now? Just gather up all your dolls and stuffed animals and let them play with you! Give out some cards for each of them, and take their turns for them! You can use funny voices, pretending to be your teddy bears and dolls! You can have your dolls and stuffed animals talking to one another! (“Would you please Bee Considerate!” Your fuzzy little you is in my way!” You can dress up your dolls. “Come on, we're going to a Spelling Bee!” This is one fun way to Bee Creative!

7. Go For A Walk Outside, And See How Many Birds, Bees, Butterflies And Bunnies You Can See!

Now obviously, this depends on where you live. If you live in a dangerous neighborhood, then skip this suggestion! But if you live in a place where you can look up and see birds, count them! Or in the spring and summer, count the bees on all the flowers! (Bee Careful – don't get too close!) And believe it or not (if you live in a city), there are places out in the country where you can take a walk and see little butterflies and bunnies! And if you've read Marjorie's Quest, you can look for other animals or even older fossils! Every month is a little March, every little fairy spider is a Harry or Harrietta, every caterpillar is an Umberto. It's fun! But remember to respect the birds, bees and animals. They all need to be safe and free. So don't try to hurt them or catch them. Let them be happy, wild and free. If you love them, do this for them. Respect them, and let them go on living their lives freely. See them, count them, count them, wish them well, and go on your way. That is the best way to show your love for them – by looking to their highest good, and trying to do what is best for them! Even respect a bug or a wolf – each one has its own life to live, and some place in the universe. And in fact, so do you! Remember that you yourself are special, unique, and have something special to give to the world!

Speak “A Y.”

A Fun Secret Language To Learn!

Just take the first letter of a word and place it at the end, and then add “AY” (rhymes with “day”). That's all there is to it!

So . . . cat becomes “at-cay”, hat becomes “at-hay”, and boot becomes “oot-bay”!

Let's try a whole sentence! “What a beautiful day!”

This becomes, “at-whay a eautiful-bay ay-day!” Don't worry about changing small words, like “a”, “of”, “it”, “is”, or “the”.

In fact, if you have trouble with any particular word, or don't know how to change it, just leave it alone, speak it normally, and just change the easier words. This is supposed to be fun, not a lot of work!

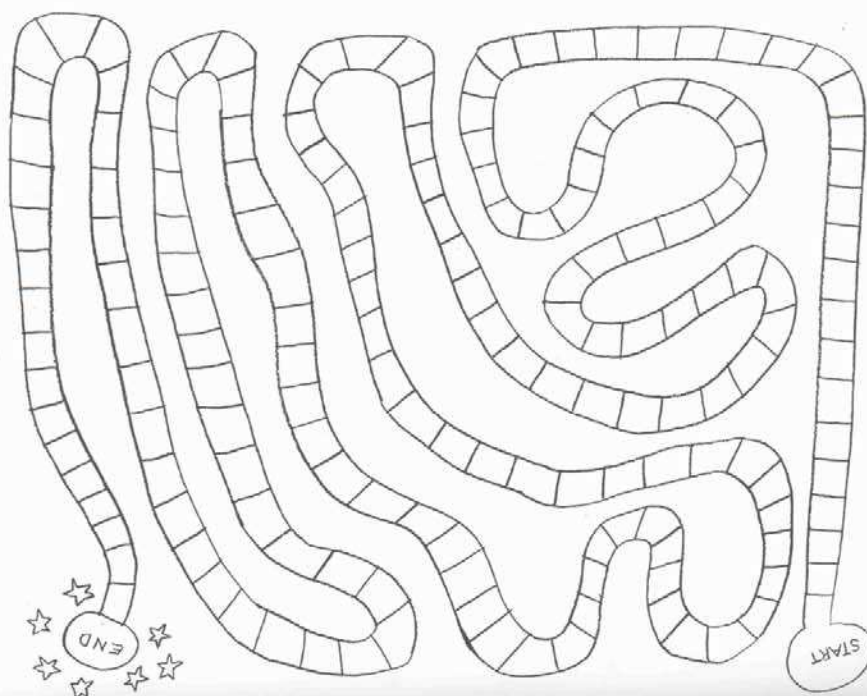

Try doing these sentences. The answers are upside-down at the end of the page.

1. “I hope I find my hula hoop.”
2. “Where is my big red beach ball?”
3. “We like to take our great big dog for walks in the park.”
4. “Please pack a picnic lunch for the party!”
5. “Finally, the sun is coming up, and the sky is gold and rosy.”

1. “I ope-hay I ind-bay my ula-hay oop-hay.”
2. “ere-whay is my ig-hay ed-ay each-bay all-bay?”
3. “We ke-hay to ake-hay our ate-gray ig-bay og-iday for alke-way in the ark-pay.”
4. “ease-play ack-pay a keic-pay unch-hay for the aty-pay!”
5. “Finally, the sun is coming up, and the sky is gold and rosy.”

SUNNY STAR

A Color-Coded Connect-The-Dots!

A special kind of Connect-the-Dots! You will need three colors of markers for this one — a yellow or light orange, a red or darker orange, and a purple or blue-purple! This is a great big star sun in another galaxy, so it is purple at the edges! Start in the middle, with the yellow or light orange, and connect the light orange dots. Then connect the red dots with red or orange. Then connect the purple dots with purple or purple blue. To avoid confusion, when there is a change of colors, the numbers on the dots skip ahead. So the yellow dots may end on "71" but the red dots may begin on "81". After you have connected the dots and see the shape, you can add in any lines you like to make a really beautiful and unique Sunny Star!

Connect The Dots
with Makani The Moth

Makani the Moth, the brave little fellow from Rainforest Rescue, needs your help! Please connect the dots to help him have another wing, so that he can fly away to give this flower to his friend, Suzanna Savanna! Makani usually has a purple body, legs and arms, so if you have any purple markers or crayons, this would be great! His swirling antennae can be different colors, and so can his wings! And if you would rather use some other color than purple, go right ahead! Do what looks good to you! You could color the sky too, with a little light blue!

MAKING CLOCKS FROM PAPER PLATES!

This is really fun! You can start with plain white paper plates, or colored paper plates, or even ones with flowers or patterns already on the borders! Here's what you need to have on hand:

paper plates
felt-tip markers crayons glitter & glue scissors pipe cleaners

First you need to draw the numbers on the plate, inside of the border or the part of the plate that curves up. Draw a small circle in the center of the plate, too.

Then cut out the arrow hands of the clock, below, but don't cut the holes in the ends of the hands yet. First place them on the plate (ask a grownup for help, if you need to) and see how long the hands should be. One hand (the minute hand) should be longer than the other (the hour hand). Then you cut holes in the ends of the hands, to match a hole in the center of your plate. To easily cut a hole, fold the paper in half, and then cut out a half moon from the fold! This works better with the paper clock hands than with the plate, because the plate is stiffer. A grownup may have to help you if you are very little, but a hole needs to be poked in the center of the plate, just wide enough for two pipe cleaners to fit through.

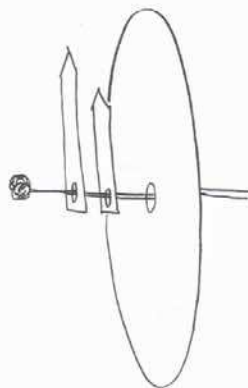

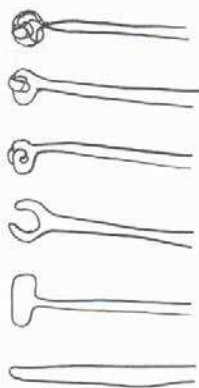

CLOCK HANDS

Bend a pipe cleaner in half, and then bend it into a sort of T-shape at the top. Then turn the sides of the T up and sort of squish them into a biobly shape. You may want to do this with two pipe cleaners to get a really nice blob. If you use two, you could use two different colors. Sparkling gold pipe cleaners are available at some craft stores, but the velvety ones are fine too. Then you just stick the two ends of the pipe cleaners through the two clock hands and the hole in the center of the plate, as shown.

Then pull the blob somewhat tight against the paper, but loose enough to be able to move the clock hands.

Then all you have to do is bend the long ends of the pipe cleaners out, on the back of the plate, and you have your clock!

You can decorate it in any way, and give these for presents. Everyone is glad to get a paper plate clock from someone who made it all special.

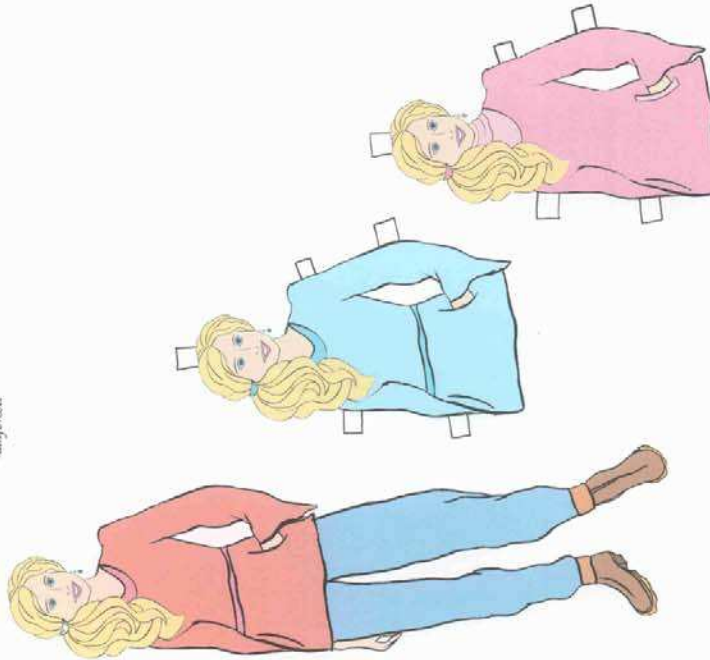

Think of other decorations you could use - sequins, beads, lace, pieces of pretty colored fabric that you could cut out with your scissors and glue down, and you can even glue artificial flowers, or dried beans in a pretty pattern, or noodles.

HELPFUL TIP: If you place dried noodles in bowls of water with water color in them, just for a few minutes, and then take them out and let them dry, these are bright and colorful things to glue on to projects like these. Don't leave the noodles in the water long enough to become soft, and don't mix the colors of noodles up while wet. Macaroni, or little lasagna noodles, anything like that, can make pretty glue-ons when dry. Probably it is best to let them dry on a paper towel overnight. Tell little children not to eat them, though - they are edible, but uncooked noodles are hard to digest.

T-Shirts, Quilts, Pillows, Toys & Mugs: Fun Things To Make For Children With Colorful, Bright Images

Did you know that you can easily make iron-on decals out of pretty images, with the aid of a computer? If you don't have a computer yourself, there are places you can go to have this done at low cost. Office supply places sell paper for computers that is specifically designed to make decals for T-shirts, and all you have to do is feed the paper through a color printer, and iron on the decals! You can make squares for quilts, or sides of pillows. Many department stores now have departments that can make a custom set of mugs from your photos, and there are specialty shops that will do this as well, listed in shopping mall directories or possibly in the yellow pages for your geographical area. These might be listed under disfigure or china. Or just ask at the service desk of any large shopping mall – someone will know where you can have this done!

HELPFUL TIP: If you are making pretty, soft pillows for children to play with, as well as lean on, a round shape is easier for throwing around – it is easier to catch, and easier to pitch to a specific person!

The Saga Of Soggy, The Rainforest Froggy

"I would be happy to tell you my story," said Soggy, with a wrinkle in his bright blue eyes. "Do you know what a saga is? It's a long story about the things that happen in someone's life, like a legend, which is an interesting story told to many people over a long time. I'll just tell you a little bit at a time, so you won't get bored. I can't hold still for very long myself -- I like to hop around and splash around in the lakes, rivers and streams! And climb up the tree branches among the flowers, for a high view, and to bask in the sunlight! But here you go, just a little bit of my saga -- before I get all soggy again by jumping back into the water! Here you go, the saga of Soggy, the Rainforest Froggy -- none other than little blue me," said Soggy with a great big blue smile.

"I was born in a pond in the deepest part of the forest, and the first thing I remember was the beautiful splashing sound of the waterfalls. The next thing I knew, I was swimming around in cool blue water, until I finally found a great big flower floating on the pond. I climbed up on a leaf, and there was sunlight all around. Then I slipped into the flower, between the petals, and fell asleep in the great big, beautiful, fragrant, ruffy flower. So -- I've been climbing into and out of pretty flowers ever since!

"Then I discovered trees, and found out that I could climb them. I have little suction cups on the bottoms of my feet so that I can stick to the trees as I climb. I can climb the tallest tree with ease. But I'm little, and can easily hide under the leaves so that other animals don't notice me. So I hear a lot of things, and usually know what is going on in the rainforest. I like to do a good deed, any time of the day or night, and help others when I have the chance, without asking anything in return. So there seem to be a lot of others who love me, even though I'm just a little blue rainforest frog! I can tell you some of my exciting adventures, later, all right? My longer saga, but a little at a time! Well, I have to go now!" And Soggy leaped off the branch into the pond below, with a big splash, diving down into the water, so that all that was left were beautiful ripples, ripping out across the sparkling waters in the sunlight."

More possible planes for Sylvia to rely on her dance performance! Maybe you could rank them, from one to six, and invent some good reasons for her to choose one plane over the other? Some planes might be good for another day, too—like, one plane might be good for flying over mountains, a helicopter might be good for taking aerial photos of the forest, another might be good for a fast flight, another plane might come with a comfortable bed (not as fast—anything you can think of)?

The Basic Snowflake Fold

Even though real snow crystals have six sides or prongs, paper snowflakes generally have eight or sixteen, as this is easier to fold evenly. Try to fold carefully, so that the edges meet — this will help keep detail from being lost as you cut.

From The Art of Snowflake Cutting,
© 1987, 1990, Perma-Joyce Light

1. To make a square from a rectangular sheet of paper, first make a diagonal fold.
2. Trim off excess at bottom, leaving a triangle.
3. Fold in half again.
4. Fold in half again.
5. Fold in half again.
6. This cut gives the snowflake its roundness. When you trim off the top triangle, cut down a little from the paper edge, as shown by the dotted line. This trims off any irregularities in the top edge, so that you are less likely to lose the top of a line (because of variances on inside layers due to cutting or folding).
7. An alternative to the usual final cut for your wedge is to trim at a slight angle. You can measure first, and cut so that both sides of the wedge are the same length.

Whether you cut to Step 6 or to Step 7 is up to you. One way of cutting is not necessarily better than the other — the effects are a little different. One way gives you taller lines alternating with shorter lines, and the other gives you lines of all the same height (if you cut to the top of the wedge). Try one wedge each way, and unfold them to compare the results.
